Judging from the extracts above quoted the intellect of these men is pre-eminently fitted to be associated with the dignity of their characters. God forbid that we should be compelled to battle these men with their own weapons, for it would be a disgrace to our profession

It is not the first time, however, these men have heralded forth their anathemas and slanderous epithets-it is not their first attempt to fasten their own infamy on the character of other men, as we shall hereafter prove.
